

GLOVES WILL GIVE DINNER FOR PRINCE AND HIS FANCEE

Function Tonight and Mrs. Draper's Party Tomorrow Will End Festivities.

CARDINAL WILL OFFICIATE

Miss Draper is Received Into Roman Catholic Church at Home Ceremonies.

Real Admiral and Mrs. Richardson Glover, this evening will give a dinner in honor of Miss Margaret Preston Draper and Prince Andrea Boncompagni, of Rome, whose marriage is to take place Wednesday.

This dinner and one to be given by Mrs. William F. Draper tomorrow evening, will bring to a conclusion a series of functions that have marked the weeks before a marriage which is of international interest.

Mrs. Draper's sister, Mrs. Preston Davis, who will arrive in town tomorrow to remain until after the wedding, and William King Richardson, of Boston; Miss Draper's trustee, will be among the dinner guests tomorrow. The dinner will be followed by informal dancing.

Last evening Miss Draper and her fiancé dined with Mr. and Mrs. John Baldwin Cochran, the latter formerly Miss Alice Whiting in contrast to the other dinner parties given for the bride, where the guests have been older and more distinguished persons, the company last evening was made up of the young friends of the bride.

Informal in Character.

It has been stated more than once that Mrs. Draper would be hostess tomorrow night at one of the brilliant costume balls for which she has been famous, but as a matter of fact, in deference to the fact that her fiancé's country is at war, and he has two brothers at the front, Miss Draper has made a point of having all of the entertaining in her honor informal in character.

Miss Draper will wear her first velvet gown and also her most precious wedding gift, a coronet of diamonds, jewels of the Boncompagni-Ludovisi family, which have been passed for her. The jewels were with her wedding gown will be a string of pearls presented to her by her father when she made her debut.

Miss Draper also made her debut in a corset of diamonds, one of her mother's gifts.

Miss Draper will give to her bridesmaids, the Misses Edith and Minna Blair, pink ostrich feather fans with amber sticks, which they will carry in place of the usual bouquets. The complete costumes of pink satin and brown tulle. The gift to Miss Dora Glover, who is to be the bridesmaid, a phre-studded bracelet. Prince Boncompagni has given to his best man, Giuseppe Braschi, of the Italian embassy, a sapphire and diamond ring.

Society's Interest Grows.

Washington society is growing more interested daily in the marriage of Miss Draper and Prince Andrea Boncompagni. When the engagement of the youngest daughter of the late William F. Draper, once a member of Congress, to Prince Boncompagni, an ambassador to Rome under President McKinley, to Prince Boncompagni, a scion of one of the oldest and most distinguished families of the Roman patriciate, was announced, it created a stir in court circles of the old world as well as in this country and not in years has Washington known an international marriage of such importance.

Moreover there are many people in Washington quite unknown to Miss Draper and her family, who have come to regard the distinguished bride as a sort of American princess royal and who feel in her wedding much the same sort of interest that the people of monarchical countries feel in the marriage of one of the royal families.

While a change in faith on the part of the bride was by no means necessary to the marriage, Miss Draper's acceptance of the Roman Catholic faith made it possible to have a wedding ceremony of great solemnity and beauty. The tapestry-lined ball room of the Draper home was transformed into a private chapel, with altar, sanctuary and ecclesiastical furnishings brought from one of the Washington churches.

His eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, will perform the marriage ceremony and Mr. Russell will celebrate the low nuptial mass which will follow. While the number of guests at the wedding will be limited to less than 100, the small company will include such dignitaries as the ambassadors of four European powers, and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Received Into Church.

Miss Draper was received into the Roman Catholic Church yesterday afternoon. The ceremony, which was private, was performed on the spot where the bride will stand for her marriage Wednesday, the place being transformed into a chapel for the occasion.

The privilege of having religious ceremonies performed in a private home, which has been granted by the Church of Rome to the Boncompagni family, extends to any member of the family in whatever country he may be.

The baptismal service, which was very short, was conducted by Monsignor Russell, and only Mrs. Draper, the bride, and Chief Justice and Mrs. White were present. Chief Justice and Mrs. White represented the sponsors, who were the parents of the bridegroom, Prince Luigi and Princess Isabella Boncompagni-Ludovisi. Mrs. White, who was Miss Letta Montgomery, is a lifelong friend of Mrs. Draper, both having been students years ago at the Sacred Heart convent at Manhattanville.

Friend of Family.

While Mrs. Draper, who was a Miss Preston of Kentucky, is a member of St. John's Episcopal Church, several members of her family have become Roman Catholics, and she has long enjoyed a close friendship with many church dignitaries in Washington and Rome.

Cardinal Gibbons has been a friend of the Draper family for many years and Mrs. Draper has given annually a dinner in his honor which was one of the most exclusive and interesting functions of the season.

Miss Draper and the prince are to be seen nearly every day walking or motor. Yesterday morning they attended a church service in an unfashionable part of town and in the afternoon Miss Draper went for a drive in Rock Creek Park with Miss Eudora Glover, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Richardson Glover, her chum, who will be maid of honor at the wedding Wednesday.

Close Finish Features Finals of Rifle Match

John A. MacLoughlin Tells of Keen Competition Between Captain Fay and Captain Richards in President's Event at Jacksonville.

In a letter written to The Times on the day of the finals in the President's match at the National Rifle match now in progress at Jacksonville, John A. MacLoughlin tells of the interest which centered in the contestants, when every shot counted for or against the competitor's chance of winning the match. The letter, in part, follows:

"Interest in today's matches centered in the final stage of the President's match. The 200 competitors with highest scores were retained for the finals and others were allowed to re-enter upon payment of the $2 fee.

"Capt. W. Garland Fay, United States Marine Corps, was the high man at the close of the second stage with an aggregate score of 192, and Captain Richards, of the Quinlan Rifle Club, was close on his heels with a score of 191. When Captain Fay went on the firing line, Captain Richards had registered fifteen consecutive bull's-eyes, and there was no indication that he would 'get out of the black.' Captain Fay made ten straight fives, but his eleventh and thirteenth shots were well out of the four.

"Gets Total of Ninety-Eight. "Meanwhile, Captain Richards had scored four-on his eighteenth and nineteenth shots and got back into the bull on the twentieth, completing his 1,000-yard score at 98, a total of 288 in the full course.

"Captain Fay now had to make a bull's-eye on every shot, for though a 97 at 1,000 yards would make his aggregate score the same as that of Captain Richards, the higher score at the longest range would give the championship to Captain Richards.

"But Captain Fay was equal to the difficult task. His supporters held their breath when the markers in the pit flashed a four disk on his seveneenth shot, and a great sigh of relief escaped the crowd as the disk was turned, showing the white side, and the score announced. Captain Fay's seventeenth shot for the record is a—a—a—five.

"Another gasp escaped when his eighteenth shot showed a bull's-eye. The nineteenth shot and then the twentieth landed fairly in the middle of the center circle, and Captain Fay was the winner of the individual military championship of the United States.

"The first to shake Fay's hand in congratulation was Richards, for Captain Richards is a thorough sportsman as well as a most excellent rifle shot.

Washingtonians Do Well.

"The National Rifle Association individual pistol match was held in the afternoon, but there were so many fires that it could not be completed. As usual, Dr. G. E. Cook, of Washington, was well up toward the top, and Sergt. C. S. Shields, of the District I. A. C., showed unexpected strength.

"A great many competitors are now shooting 'skidoo' tickets. The ticket covers a string of ten shots and is purchased for a quarter. If one makes 90 per cent of the possible score, he receives a souvenir medal, and if his score is a possible, he receives a silver medal. A gold medal will be awarded the competitor who makes a possible followed by the largest number of additional fives. One man shot fifty-three consecutive bull's-eyes, and his score hasn't been equaled yet. R. M. Norris, of Central High School, the 'boy wonder,' made a trip to the top with a skidoo ticket and knocked out a possible on his ten shots.

"The Washington cadets are putting in considerable time on the 1,000-yard ranges. Shooters here are of the opinion that the five high men of the cadet team at rapid fire, made five high men for the entire national team match."

Chicago Woman Arrested On Demanding Real Shave

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Helen Wade entered the barber shop of Charles Collins today and, stating herself in a barber chair, demanded a shave. For fifteen minutes the owner argued with her and ordered her to leave. She refused to go and Collins called Policeman John J. Hourigan.

"I'll not leave here until I get a shave, and the sooner the better," the woman insisted. Hourigan took a razor and began to imitate a barber's motions over her face. Finally he announced that she had been shaved and asked her to leave the shop. "You can't kid me," the woman said when the policeman told her she had been shaved. "That razor never touched my face and I won't leave here."
